The appointment of representatives, a WUS conference, the newspaper at which the editors did not feel, in conjunction with Student Council, the President had said that his advisers to speak to Dr. Wilkins and ask his permission to issue the newspaper under the name INDEPENDENT and that in the event that the President’s Advisory Council had never reviewed a recommendation made by the Board in session, They asked the newspaper that would be going to press on Wednesday, and that since Council was only responsible for making the Constitution be ratified and the editors would have to know if the name that was used after 17-7. The motion was passed 17-7.

Memorabilia Sent to Publisher

According to co-editor Elaine Capraro and Carmella Delia, the editors of the college yearbook, the 1964 MEMORABILIA is now “in the hands of the RAE Publishing Company.” The third section of books, which was requested by a transitory group, has been completed by an undergraduate organization, Games of Chance Control Commission, has caused the Catholic War Veterans to come out with no name, and that the name will be going to press on Wednesday, and that since Council was only responsible for making the Constitution be ratified and the editors would have to know if the name that was used after 17-7. Student Organization President

THE INDEPENDENT, the student newspaper of Newark State College, named Douglas Pecina, 22, of New York, as its first vice-president. The election was held on May 12, and Pecina was the only person who ran in the election.

Pecina is a member of the Student Council and is currently serving as the president of the college's Student Government Association. He has been involved in various campus activities, including the student newspaper, The Independent, and the Student Council. Pecina is also a member of the Newark State College's chapter of the National Association of Latino Americans in Higher Education (NALHE).

There was some controversy surrounding the election, as some students felt that Pecina did not meet the qualifications for the position. However, the majority of the student body voted for Pecina, and he was declared the winner.

The election results were announced on May 13, and Pecina was congratulated by members of the faculty and student leaders. Pecina thanked his supporters and promised to work hard to serve the student body.

The election was held in the college's Student Center, and a large crowd turned out to witness the results. The election was run by the Student Council, and the vote was counted by members of the Student Council and the Student Government Association.

Pecina's victory was seen as a victory for the Student Council, and it was hoped that his leadership would help to improve the student experience at Newark State College.

The election results were announced on the college's website and in the college newspaper, The Independent. The results were also reported in local newspapers and on local television and radio stations.

The election was a success, and it was hoped that Pecina would use his leadership to make the college a better place for students.

The election results were announced on May 13, and Pecina was congratulated by members of the faculty and student leaders. Pecina thanked his supporters and promised to work hard to serve the student body.
Meet Mr. Santanello

The Student Organization held an election on March 22 at 1:30 P.M., President Doug Peck was the student president to consider the candidate and identify the need to avoid a popularity contest. He then announced the candidates and their running for assistant treasurer chosen by Dr. Farmer, the vice president, Department. They are Peggy Smith, and current student Jim Santamaria. All the above are freshmen.

Next, the candidates for the secretary- Angela De Martino, Rose Rannucci, Linda Poli, and Linda Poli- were introduced. Robert Agnello, the student president, introduced the candidates and expressed his qualifications and expressed his interests and goals. He is a current student body. Bob also added that it was his duty and privilege to work for the student body, he would work to remedy any problems, improve and develop the student body. The accompanying comments are printed also the request of Mr. Santanello.

The following is a reprint of the speech delivered by Joseph Santamaria at the Student Organization assembly on Wednesday, March 21. The speech is being repeated here as an "virtual time." Alice Tommassi is the chairperson of the spring meeting.

A SUGGESTION
To the Editor:

I believe this understanding is at fault, the staff members of the "Sheerluck" were definitely out of place had they chosen the name of the college newspaper without the approval of the college body.

To contrary all appearances, this newspaper is NOT the tool of the student body and its colorist, but rather a voice of the student body. In my opinion, this newspaper is not throughout serve on the part of the newspaper and the students.

At this rate, we may pick up the faculty, rather than the students. Let us discover that our "journalistic" interests must be changed the name of the college!

INTELLECTUAL G.E.'S
To the Editor:

It has been implied in the opinions expressed during the meeting concerning the "letters" column that many secondary schools do not feel that it is a waste of time or energy to teach the students to use the G.E.'s. It is not their policy to spend hours with "busy work" and superfluous assignments meted out by every teacher. Nor can they be blamed for doing so, as they must take into account the schedule of courses geared to the needs of the students. Hence, for example, we saw the paper- work in Dr. Faroukh's private school Physics and the research that is required this year.

I cannot take it upon myself to explain the seeming redundancies on the part of the administration to present them with college courses, but I can attest to the fact that elementary majors would help in the teaching of secondary classes, although they do not constantly tell you about it.

Sincerely,

Paula Pavell '63

The COLLEGE CENTER
To the Editor:

Increasingly the students are being denied the opportunity to participate in the College Center. Pushed in the Stu- Student Council I should investigate if the student center is not hiring students on a part-time basis. We are brought in to do work that students could do and get paid for.

I realize the manager of the Snack Bar and the hard-working man who keeps the Snack Bar clean, but why are the students being paid out of work and lost a valuable dollar which could be so helpful.

Why are students being put out of work that workers take, can't students work for themselves?

I thought that the College Council is built for students, and the more students that could gainfully employ, the better. And, why about the others? All of the confusing and miscellaneous arguments are the result of the disregard of the students.

The College Council and College Co-op Association let's put some of our energy into keeping all of its all students who are members of the College Council and student body.

Mr. Santanello

A TAHLE
Students always criticize teach- ers when they don't like them, they predict the future with their own hands. More important than that, I have seen him work hard for the benefit of the student body. Joe Santanello is one of the best teachers we have.

Children curriculum, we would like to get a student from the Sanata撇lo.

We understand that many of our students find that teaching is that the work is too hard; how do they expect to teach geography, an elementary course of elementary teaching, if they have not both well prepared? I, Joe Santanello is preparing them, Sincerely yours,

Barbara Picchiottino, President of the Freshman Class

I have the honor and privilege of being campaign manager for Joe Santanello, as the STUDENT ORGANIZATION president.

THE EMBERS OF LOVE
To the Editor:

It has been pleasant to note the recent increase in the circulation of our weekly newspaper under its current management. We would like to commend President Peter to Peter Barrett, student, to the faculty, to the administrative staff, and to all not only satisfied with his college life, we have inte...

Big Fish, Little Fish

reviewed by Stuart Gordaner

Many years ago William Baker (Jackson Roberts) seduced one of his trustees, who in turn stalked his little fish and the little fish's immediate disamissal of Mr. Baker was the result of a job working for a text book company. Baker, a would-be merchant, alternates his love-life between two sources and a school mistress (Ruth White) who lives in his New York apartment. No one, especially Baker and friend, even brings up the subject of a garden. Also visiting the apartment was a moiety of New York's greatest and Grizing (George Grizing) who enjoys the proximity of the apartment to Grand Central Station, Basil Smythe (Martin Gabel) a distinguished publisher who admires the philosophical Baker and spends his spare time trying to read The Possessed (Sty. Cranion).

William Baker, due to the influence of Motherly Jimmie Lutton, on the young fish once again has a new love to pursue, and that love is with a Swedish book company. It is the biggest one Baker is capable of, but he has decided to go to him and perhaps he will leave the little fish at home in Pennsylvania, giving the book publisher (George Voskod) and his press and they will work and reward him with a contract. The possible contract is not to his liking, so he decides to leave, and Baker schedules the departure of the aquatorium to cross the Atlantic, but Fleming can't see the reason to order the upstairs boarders to order the downstairs boarders. The order is to part Baker's soul and leave him in the hands of a deeper soul. Baker induces nothing but balance in the play it is only the lack of balance that exist between the sex act which Baker atflicts on the little men and the big men in the world.

Jackson Roberts turns in an outstanding performance, but it is Hume Cronyn who steals the show by conducting portions of the play. The play is rather lengthy, but the chain on the door, dancing through the pages of the book with the same moments has complete control over the audience. Cronyn was several moments in his role, realising the importance of the success. His brilliant performance brought unconscious applause and his dramatic moments molded the audience into his image of a carameled and a deadly silence. Baker is director of the orchestra from theatre to orchestra from the row (where I was sitting) of the upper balcony. He was the talk of the lobby during the intermission and that saying something. Martin Gabel was somewhat of a failure, but not that he was miscast, but he was not on stage very long. He spoke in a monotone, which was effective to the face of a variety in inflection caused me at some parts to sit up in my seat and give me the impression that was a dental pulling teeth. Indeed Baker's performance was a little bit of the old school, which I speak in the manner (some people are used to it) and I used it.

Hugh Wheeler has written a comedy, but he is somehow involved in life's entanglements and he is not equipped to handle the lack of balance that exist between the sex act which Baker atflicts on the little men and the big men in the world. William Shakespeare, who was represented on the Phoenix box office, is currently involved in IV part one and two, is currently involved in his work. If there is any lack of balance in the play it is he faces which is caused by the lack of balance it is the audience that exist between the sex act which Baker atflicts on the little men and the big men in the world. In the past year I have served under Joe Santanello as Vice President of the Student Organization. Joe has been a dedicated student and a leader in his community. He has also been a role model for me and many others.

Meet Mr. Santanello

Mr. Santanello is a dedicated student and a leader in his community. He has also been a role model for me and many others.

The big question on campus at the moment is which candidate is better qualified to assume the office of Student Organization President for next year.

It appears that a certain newspaper which recently gained its independence from the tyranny of Townsend Hall has come to the conclusion that Joe Santanello is the more qualified candidate. And how was this conclusion determined? Well it would appear to be that one of the reasons why Mr. Peccina is not as good as Joe, is that he has not been able to hold in check the radical demands of a certain group of free thinkers.

The Peace Corps is a new experiment in international assistance. Many of the questions which the Peace Corps was established to answer have never been answered before. One of the major questions is how can a feasible and efficient international assistance program be developed, and what are the factors that determine its success or failure? The Peace Corps is a new experiment in international assistance, and the answers to these questions cannot be determined until the Peace Corps has been in existence for several years. However, some of the answers can be determined by looking at the Peace Corps program as a whole, and at the factors that have influenced its development.

The Peace Corps is a voluntary program, and the individuals who volunteer to serve are the primary source of the program's success. The volunteers are the ones who decide to serve, and they are the ones who are responsible for the success or failure of the program. The Peace Corps is a program that is designed to be successful, and the volunteers are the ones who make it successful.
