I had promised myself the pleasure of meeting with you on my present visit to this city when I hope to hear the good news, wishing to call your attention to your note of my brother due the 16th instant. Having parted with it I hope that you will be no disappointment in paying it at maturity.

I left him on his bed to which he has been confined for life, thanks to a violent attack of inflammatory disease. I am happy to add that my letters of today inform me that he is much better – it would be an act of charity to you to visit him now for the confinement at this season to the country. Yours sincerely...

Sincerely,
