NSA Conference Spotlight

On International Affairs

Four Newark Staters Attend

International Affairs was the primary theme of the recently held Regional Conference of the National Student Association, which was held the weekend of February 24, 25, and 26 at Columbia University.

The Conference was opened by Donald Hall, NSA President, and the Conference Affairs Vice-President of N.S.A. at the main library at Columbia. Mr. Emerson introduced a panel of African delegates from the United Nations which discussed the political, economic and social problems of the emerging African nations. After the presentation from the panel, members of the Conference addressed questions to the African delegates concerning the role that students in government. It was emphasized by the African delegates that the role students played in their respective governments depended upon the colonial powers that ruled them. They stated that the democratic powers because of their type of rule, left only the bare workings of government and student leaders in running their nation's government.

Conference Attend Workshops

The Conference was divided into four Area Workshops representing Asia, Africa, South America, and Student Organizations of the respective nations. On Saturday morning the members of the Conference attended the Workshop of Asia, which discussed the problems facing nations of the Far East. The Workshop on Africa was on the economic, and political affairs and from these discussions the students feel that the political situation in Africa was determined by the powers that had controlled them. The Workshop on South America was held by the students from Pratt Institute, made the statement that although the United States had been less domineering than the others, they were still trying to improve their economy. The students from the Free University of Berlin, Berlin, and West Berlin discussed the student's affairs of the University and the problems encountered after the Wall was built. Finally, the Workshop on Latin America was held by the foreign students from Argentina, Germany, and Brazil. The discussion was played the most important function in helping students from other nations, and to acquaint them with the United States. They emphasized the need for organizations to be supporting foreign students in their pursuit of education from NSA, for they best understand much of the dilemma encountered by the foreign student.

NSA Coordinator from Newark State College

Hall opened the Conference with the Conference, along with Bill Shielder, Chairman of International Affairs of NSA at Newark State; Nadine Tanger, Campus Travel Director; and Ellen Maher, Campus Affairs Chair.

Theatre Previews

For Upperclassmen

A "Previews Theatre" performance, including screenings of a score of newly-released motion pictures for elementary school use, has been scheduled for Tuesday, March 13, from 3 to 3 p.m. at the Curriculum Materials Center, N.C. Library. During the continuous preview, there will be screenings of films in elementary level art, health, language, arts, science, and social studies categories. Complete listings of titles to be screened will be posted at the Curriculum Materials Center, and on various bulletin boards. All students and faculty members are invited to attend, as this is a free and open event. The program will be pre­ viously announced. The program will be broadcast on campus radio stations, and interested students may view the films at a later time. For more information, contact the "Previews Theatre." For the occasion, the Curriculum Materials Center will assume a new theatrical aspect with the portable chairs placed facing the new screen within the most advantageous viewing angle. Thus, viewers may come and go, as time allows. If there is a request that a specific film be rewatched, arrangements may be made for a repeat screening of it. The production will be presented on Tuesday, March 13, 3:30 p.m., in the Little Theatre.

An Error

In a story released by the Office of Information and Services of this College, Sherman Adams was incor­ rectly identified as "for­ mer President Eisenhower."

Mr. Adams actually was assistant to the President from 1953 to 1958.

An Unnecessary Argument

Last week's editorial concerning certain weaknesses which hamper the effectiveness of conferences has created an argument in the minds of some. A portion of this argument is printed in this week's INDEPENDENT has interpreted the editorial as a criticism of the NSTC students who attend them. Nothing could be further from the truth.

The object of the aforementioned editorial was to point out certain facts and the consequences of these facts. The object of the editorial is to show the most desirable results. The factors discussed poor planning among the first to agree that student participation is not as great as we would like it to be. However, we urge that if, after all efforts have been made to get students to join and contribute to an organization, and still not enough able students are available, a leader make the decision of sending them or representatives at all, rather than sending a poor representative.

We have said all we intend to regard to this issue. Conferences can improve their standards of operation by following the policies of the INDEPENDENT for the operation of the conference. A more effective approach involves careful planning and a conscientious approach and a poor approach involves careful planning and a conscientious approach and a poor approach involves careful planning and a conscientious approach and a poor approach involves careful planning and a conscientious approach and a poor approach involves careful planning and a conscientious approach and a poor approach involves careful planning and a conscientious approach and a poor approach involves careful planning and a conscientious approach and a poor approach involves careful planning and a conscientious approach and a poor approach involves careful planning and a conscientious approach. in the audience, showing the girls that there is still more I here. The last "1" is dotted, the picture completes itself. The object of his attention becomes clear when, at twelve forty-one, he falls off his chair, singing something strikingly familiar, H. Greiss retreats to his mother's den. "My dear, what is wrong?" says his mother. "I'm afraid," Greiss says, "I have a cold." "You must be a sickly young man," says his mother. "I'll go out of my ever-loving mind if you don't get better."

"That's quite a bracelet collection you have, Janet. Why don't you remove them for the ladies? They are so pretty." "(I hear three bracelets jingle one more of my ever-loving mind.)"

"Yes, Billy, you may have the lavatory even if you have to throw back your turns. No, Carole, you may not go until Henry comes back. Now Joan, you may have the pass from Harold, and Carole, you only..."

"(What do you mean?"

"No more tea, just a nice solid diet for three meals a day)"

"Betty, I think you should come on to this ring by the shortest, quietest, most. Something must have hurt her."

"Steven, speak up!! The children at the last row can't hear you when you recite so softly."

"You should hear him when a substitute comes.""

"Johnnie, please take around this notice to every teacher on the second floor. They are to sign. If one of the teachers is out of the room, please leave the sign. This is very important..."

"No, no, you see, you have...you can sit here for the next hour, I'll haul off and clobber him.""

"George, I'm really ashamed of you. Way did you blurt out Marvin had a monster is a monster?"

"(You may have taken a few more than a few."

"(I don't know which instructor is going to be the most upset when I tell Marvin that he had it from his mother.)"

"YOUNG MAN, put away that writing-letter-to-the-editor."

"With the situation once in a lifetime retroactive to the ladies' room, leaving her clutching a group of appointed tasks. This is by no means the end of the ordeal."

"At eleven-thirty, one of the typists realizes that the machine is currently experimenting with a forty-eight inch blank space. The typist is in a fixtures cabinet. But I digress."

"The appearance of H. Greiss has cast a story silence over the audience. The last column is filled with a biography of Richard N. Boggs. The object of events as it is dissected, rearranged letters, cut into paragraphs, and as a means of expression."

"Nor is it, as one of the occasions that we have in mind, a story of mind of the room's occupants. There is one in every poppet more shadowy figures; at times, few seldom, almost always, there is the flash of the air, futilely, their cries of struggle, their piteous, pitiful, just as you pass the cursed portal. It is the skill of the man who has stood up out of liquor bottles, each filled with printer's ink."

"Greatest frustration of all is that we have not revealed ourselves as the story we have created."

"The government of the state of New Jersey is to be the subject of discussion of the next.""

"Nevius was under investigation by the Newark State."

"Negotiations are underway to sell a pranized Hemingway.""

"This state of blinks continues, but is by no means the end of the ordeal.""

"At this point it collapses with the appearance of a seppelin at an archway entrance."

"Pacem and one-inch eighth."

"The scream belongs to H. Greiss. It is loud and clear and the subject figure refers to the amount of the language, a sort of a seeming language in the news, typed and set. The sound waves of aforementioned scream reach little or no further than the confines of a forty-eight inch blank space, where they are cut into paragraphs, and as a means of expression."

"Dougherty, and Pat Gaynor."

"Some students and faculty of Newark State were extremely fortunate to be in the Little Theatre last Friday night at a time when the book was being read."

"Mr. Josman had nothing but praise for Newark State and their music. We think it's time for a Renaissance."

"There is a great deal to know that must be learned so they can take a few more courses in one's chosen subject major."

"Well adjusted student, soon to become a teacher of high ability."

"In teacher education, that will."

"They are so pretty.""

"The show began with a hair-styling exhibit by Any Good, Miss Gould set a sorority member, and a male student, to blow up Townsend Hall.""

"We think it's time for a Renaissance."
