"Books for Asia" Collection Day Set

At a luncheon of the Senator Club a date was voted for a "Books for Asia" day, Friday, March 23, has been set for the date. All Newark State students are requested to bring at least one book on that day to the Senator Club. Members of the Senator Club have volunteered to set up collection stations at each door of the College to receive these books.

At the same luncheon the Senator Club for this year presented to the students on the campus.

Senator Kefauver - talks informally with NSC students

Vo lu me II No. 20

Newark State College, New Jersey

"Who dares to teach must never cease to learn."

Oscar Wilde
The candidates for Student Council President and Vice-President will address the student body in the auditorium at 1:50 P.M. today. Candidates for the other Student Council offices will also address the students at this time.

The only opportunity for everyone to see and hear the candidates before the election is on Tuesday, March 21. We strongly urge all students (seniors are also qualified to vote) to attend the assembly and carefully consider what is said. We recognize that some students may not be able to attend the candidates meetings, but we do not know all of the individuals running for office. Anyone casting a vote without this thorough knowledge of the candidates and perhaps to the future of student government at Newark State College.

A fellow student’s background and experience, his capabilities, and his dedication to the betterment of college life are the factors the candidates and perhaps to the future of student government at Newark State College.

Several of Senator Goldwater’s statements were disastrous at best. He accused unemployment and balance-of-trade developments in Europe were radically different from those made by President Kennedy at his press conference on the same day. He cited the failure of the rival Democratic rally as evidence of the decline of Liberalism, casually ignoring the fact that it was organized less than a fortnight before.

It is only in this way that men are able to develop their mental processes, understand themselves and others, influence the world around them and realize their common humanity.

If you do not feel Junior Practicum was an essential part of your preparation for teaching:

Mary Jane Carroll, G.F., Major

Junior Practicum proved to be the most meaningful experience I have had. At the beginning of our eight week period, most of us felt unsure of ourselves as future teachers. Being placed in a real classroom with rewarding experiences as well as problems is the only possible way to discover your own abilities and weaknesses.

The first few lessons taught had to be planned without any idea how to teach. However, as my experience grew, I discovered that lesson plans are only a dull chore. Each day I knew my growth, and my ways of presentation varied. I felt there was no other way of gaining valuable teaching experience than to spend eight weeks out in the field.

Betsy Cahill, G.F., Major

Junior Practicum is important to me because of the need to develop a secure feeling about teaching. It gave me an idea of what to expect of myself, a cooperating teacher, and the students.

On the other hand, Senior Student Teaching brought me closer to the experience of teaching on my own. Therefore, weighing both experiences in careful relation, I believe that Student Teaching was a more important part in preparing me for my teaching career.

Joe Columbus, Special Ed.

One of the principal characteristics of Newark State College is its program of Junior Practicum. This experience can only be judged as an asset rather than a hindrance. Valuable experiences are derived through current practice, which is an essential part of the training program.

J.M. -
The Optate of Bridge

There almost seems to be a determination on the part of a substantial portion of the Newark State student body to avoid intellectual, or even intelligent, conversation. This dearth of higher communication perhaps is evident among the regular habituees of the Snack Bar, one-third of whom discuss no philosophy or thought higher than that of Charles Goren; even this erudite group must, to some extent, be considered more social than some others whose backslapping, screaming and grunting at times cause one to wonder how they are called away to the evolutionary process.

Man has developed a brain which enables him to rise above the level of the ape. He possesses within him the power to analyze the intellectual, or even intelligent, conversation. This dearth or higher teaching experience and profit from our errors. Each student (except myself) who enters Practicum experience for himself, and I do not wish to evaluate my practice experience for himself. Each of these opportunities, which occurred in my senior year.

I believe that teachers must be confidence in my abilities as an instructor, as I cannot afford to be ineffective in the procedures of a school system. These two assets helped me to improve the best of my ability. Quite contrary to the views upheld by some individuals, Junior Practicum is a valuable experience necessary for anyone who is seriously considering the teaching profession.

Vote to attend the assembly and carefully consider what is said. We recognize that some students may not be able to attend the candidates meetings, but we do not know all of the individuals running for office. Anyone casting a vote without this thorough knowledge of the candidates and perhaps to the future of student government at Newark State College.

The American public is far from being a thoroughly educated one, as evidenced by the regular habituees of the Snack Bar, one-third of whom discuss no philosophy or thought higher than that of Charles Goren; even this erudite group must, to some extent, be considered more social than some others whose backslapping, screaming and grunting at times cause one to wonder how they are called away to the evolutionary process.

Second Day

of Doom

by Bernadette Re

This Second Day of Doom was filled and very still. Food is stacked in cans on tables; the steady yellow beam of a battery-powered lamp makes the water in the gallon coffee urn dance; a tinkle of syrup. The bunk beds stand starkly against the gray cinderblocks, their drapes are rumpled. An easy chair alone remained when the stress assmeered. My boss was the small voice which back at them, to run in all directions at once. Had I been stronger, I would have done anything for whatever might come; instead. First, here: As the door slammed shut behind me, the fear paralyzed me again. Now, the frenzied panic: this nightmare has passed, but this toomb-like room is too much for me to bear of. dread is strong.

Let us be not too acruous to the remains of civilization. I can see no person, nor can I hear a voice. My calling is to find my friends who have always held the prices on this drug out the door. Wages and excess spending must be held down; in our present progress we have already priced ourselves outside of the market. We must do business with the Common Market and this will require the reeduaction of the manufacturer of the drug after this period.

The Senator pointed out that the position of the United States as a world power depends on our ability to hold the price of this drug. We cannot afford to lose the price war.

Other speakers in this year's meeting were Dr. John Adams, who will speak on April 11, and Charles P. Romualt, May 22.

Voices Inc., on a capella octet, will appear March 22.

Voices Inc., a Negro vocal group associated with the Newark State College, an entertainment unit of the Newark State College, which has been successful in its first appearance, will present a second program at the Newark State College on March 22. The group consists of eight members, all of whom have been involved in the Negro movement. The group has performed at numerous concerts and has received glowing reviews for its singing ability and musical talent.

The program will feature a variety of Negro spirituals, folk songs, and contemporary Negro music. The group will be accompanied by a small orchestra, which will provide the musical accompaniment for the songs.

Jack and Me

by Daniel 1. Pelely

Me - "It's great to be back."

Jack - "Yes, we have missed you."

Me - "Student Teaching."

Jack - "Hello! What else would you like to talk about?"

Me - "I know - but I learned many things."

Jack - "Like the blind leading the blind I'll be."

Me - "I see, it's all just as I expected."

Jack - "Do you miss me?"

Me - "No, I miss the girls."

Jack - "What did you say?"

Me - "Beauty lies in the eyes of the beholder - and I like what I see."

Jack - "Me like to hold - I'm not sure."

Me - "Jack, where did you do?"

Jack - "Well, I've been singing high; look at Bob King (101)."

Me - "They weren't so high"

Jack - "I have to say - I saw the girls last week."

Me - "Jack - What happened?"

Jack - "Nothing."

Me - "Maybe I didn't think they believed it."

Jack - "What did you do?"

Jack - "Sometimes a little math."

Me - "Sounds cool."

Jack - "Oh, yes - look Jack."

Me - "I see you later.

Jack - "But if I were to say, "Parting is such sweet sorrow, would I not say goodbye to you tonight?""

Jack - "Don't."
Fine Arts Film Club Offers "Alexander Nevsky"

Scene from "Alexander Nevsky"

"An entrancing, engrossing and completely superb production" was the comment made by the New York Post concerning "Alexander Nevsky," a film to be shown at Newark State on March 20 by the Fine Arts Film Club. The plot concerns the invasion of Russia in 1242 by the powerful Order of the Teutonic Knights who, as crusaders, swept across the Baltic provinces. They were met by the people of the free city-state of Novgorod under their Prince Alexander Nevsky. At Lake Peipus the fierce and decisive Battle of the Ice was fought and Alexander Nevsky won a brilliant victory.

From these historical events, Sergei Eisenstein, author and director, fashioned his "monumental film of epic proportions, widely recognized as one of the all-time classics." His collaboration with Sergei Prokofiev, composer of the film's music, was particularly fruitful, because he realized here many of his theories about the relationship of sound and image.

English subtitles accompany the Russian dialogue, in the first uncut version available in the United States. It will be shown on March 20, at 1:30 and 7:30 P.M., in the Little Theater.

Parking Committee Announces Changes

Parking in the so called "Mad Flat" has been ordered ended by the college administration. This area was never officially opened to NSC students for parking, and due to the extreme mud conditions of the past weeks, this area has been closed. Parking is legal in both the paved lot running along Morris Avenue and the Green Lane stoned area.

1. The Campus Police shall direct traffic into the paved parking lot first; however using his own discretion to direct traffic into the stoned area immediately where the traffic is lightest. Lately the traffic problem has caused backing up of traffic into parking areas.

2. Tickets will be given for driving against the one-way lanes, established for quicker entrance and exit from the paved parking lot. More signs shall be added.

3. The paved parking lot shall be extended towards Elizabeth Avenue, making the traffic flow in a single structural to the present one. Construction on this project shall start at the end of March.

4. In relation to the extension or any other phase of parking, which is controllable by this group and not state policy, would you please place any suggestions written on parking ticket envelopes in the appropriate box in the Business Office.

Goldwater Addresses YAF

That the country must be conserved to protect individual freedom from collective slavery, was a major point expressed by Barry Goldwater at the Young Americans for Freedom Rally held at Madison Square Garden on March 1. Several NSC students were in attendance.

Awards were presented by the conservative organization for the struggle for world liberation from communism. The crowd of approximately 18,000 saw awards presented to Ex-President Herbert Hoover, Ex-Governor Charles E. Todo, Senator Strom Thurmond, John Dos Passos, John Wayne, Senator John Tower, Barry Goldwater and others.

The three and one half hour rally ended with all of the Y.A.F. students in attendance giving welcome to Barry Goldwater.

Faculty Platform

How much responsibility should students receive in governing themselves, particularly in a dormitory situation such as Newark State will soon have?

Prof. Daniel Blount

In many areas, once the ground rules have been worked out to the mutual satisfaction of students and administration, the students should be allowed to "carry on." I believe this situation exists at the present time. The administration must however be granted the final "yes" or "no." Final decision concerning all aspects of college policy, regulations, the administration rests the ultimate responsibility.

As students develop the appetite for a larger slice of responsibility, I feel it will be there waiting for them. After all, our school is growing rapidly and becoming much more complex. The new dormitory will open a whole new area of activity and opportunity. For one thing, I hope to see a student-designed plan for dormitory activities. For another, how about considering a student court to handle individual infractions of rules? We have a parking court, but the enlarged court could also enforce decorations of dorms, etc.

With a spirit of mutual cooperation and understanding between students and administration,本届 gain will come to all of us.

Edward Martin

"Now, I would like to touch upon our Student Council's most interesting work. With the possible exceptions, the Council members are the greatest asset in the many areas of governing our college." I "would like to implement a change from this type of organization to one in which one, two, or three Council Representatives could work with the bulk of their support being you, from untrained underclassmen. This is necessary because many of our students have to be the Student Government as a whole because they are not interested in all phases of its operation. Under the system I propose, if a student is interested in a specific area, such as the parking situation, he or she could be elected to become a member of the committee charged with investigation of areas for improvement, and work for the benefit of himself and also gain insight into the workings of his Student Organization.

"Special interests also involve clubs. Should I be elected, I will strive to meet the needs of any group that is interested in a specific club. I will strive to meet their needs. This help in financial aid to groups from your Student Organization, if necessary.

"If elected, I will strive to complete any project started by the present representatives and administration as well as emulate the fine practices for which he has been noted.

"If you have any questions about my policies or ideas, feel free to see me at any time. I can be found in Room 110 from 11:30 to 12:30 every day,

Prof. Barbara Shepardson

Student self-government in the new dormitory can provide additional opportunities for students and the kind of growth that college authorities want to accomplish.

The more varied the opportunities for leadership, the greater the variety of people who will be able to have this kind of growth experience. For some students this may be the first time they will have the chance to make important decisions on their own.
