we cannot mention World Youth Unity Week, March 21 to 28, without recognizing clearly that the student, as a youth, has an integral part to play in promoting world unity.

If each one of us had a red block, a white block, and a blue block, we should group them in different ways, each according to our own liking. And so it would be with the words: world, student, and unity.

Some would claim that there is no relation between these words, except that they are all nouns, and that each has its own respective meaning. Others would concede that world and unity are definitely related in view of our recent experiences on the battlefield, and would declare that world unity is essential in realizing our aims of world peace, security, and prosperity. Still others would place student and unity in one category because there is a common bond between those who attend institutions of higher learning, and because all American students have similar academic problems and needs, especially in relation to student government, curricular extra-curricular activities, and student rights. The final group consists of those who believe that world, student, and unity are inseparable. They would point out that students are tomorrow's leaders and that they have high stakes in all phases of world affairs, academic, economic, and political.

Viewing these four credos frankly and objectively, we notice that we cannot say one is right and the other wrong. We notice that the question is not one of right or wrong, but that one that depends upon our level of development and understanding of why we fought the war against fascism, of what Willkie's famous phrase, One World, actually means, and how we can achieve a world free from want and fear, of what United Nations and United Nations Organization mean to us.

We can now agree that the degree of maturity is the key to grouping these three simple words, world, student, and unity, and that the highest level of maturity recognizes world student unity as one.

There are those of us who will find it difficult to comprehend and follow the reasoning and conclusions that were previously stated. This is a challenge for us. The world today is challenging us both as students and as potential educators. The world today is challenging us by placing before us three little words: world, student, and unity! Are we going to accept this challenge and vanquish it?

When we speak of world student unity, we think of it in three parts: academically—ahead of freedom and the ivory tower of higher education; economically—future employment, higher wages, controlled price scale, and increased production; politically—domestic and foreign policy.

One important phase of world student unity politically is our foreign policy. Let us recognize that we cannot say to Russia, or Britain, or China, or France, or any of our allies, "America believes in the right of every nation to form its own type of government democratically. Trust us, we believe in big democratic actions in other countries, will it not injure our individual determinations to live in One World, united?

If we agree that world student unity is a key factor in answering our needs today, we can therefore understand that we cannot mention World Youth Unity Week, March 21 to 28, without recognizing clearly that the student, as a youth, has an integral part to play in promoting world unity.

New Life from Death

Why must this erving rain persist?
And send up from the shelter that I find
Adding much pain to one who had no ease of mind.
Sixes first the clouds sent forth their endless mist!

I pray for morning's ever-clearing light,
That with the opening of the day too, may find my sight,
And pass afar over the sudden
Upon whose bosom falls relentless rain.

But from this rain the green things soon will grow,
And I will see the life toward which it goes.

Yes, from the pelting rain I come to know
That it will last, but that we yet will live.

The State Department recently issued an Ellen G. S. School Board letin entitled "Building Citizenship in a Democracy through the Social Studies." The booklet considered the new social studies program as a means of attaining democracy in the elementary school.

Assistant Commissioner Thomas J. Durrell led the discussion after Dr. Dougall had presented the沦论的. Chairman of the conference was Dr. Wilkins.

Students of the College served tea to the guests after the meeting.

Tips From the Needles

This is it—the music column again. But we're really singing praises today—Ring Crosby, for one, has done it again! We mean to have a special column on Crosby later on, in a day or two, once we have heard it. Crosby does a neat vocalizing job with "Bing," to make this an up and coming tune. Mr. G. E., when Cros is a certain job crooning it "It's Anybody's Song." Listen for 'em.

Down at St. John's Terrace Room recently, the smooth Tommy Dorsey orchestra kept the fans interested with a little "Souvenir Overture," which is supposed to mean "Souvenir of that Moment You Met." Doubtlessly you've heard the record, with Stuart Foster and the Sentimentals on the organ.

Before Jerome Kern, modern composer extraordinary, died, he had written many songs which are still popular, including his own "The Way You Look Tonight," "Smoke Gets in Your Eyes," "I'll Be Seeing You," and "You'd Be So Nice to Come Home To."

Junior, the idol of today, it is essential that we dedicate our time and energy, and make this an up and coming tune.

QESTION: DO YOU FEEL THAT AN OFFICIAL DELEGATE FROM THE TEACHERS COLLEGES THROUGHOUT THE COUNTRY SHOULD BE SENT TO THE WORLD STUDENT CONFERENCE?

(Studios's Note: The United States Arrangements Committee, which is composed of persons known as student organizations, is now considering how the American student delegation to the World Student Conference, which convenes in August at Paris, will be elected. At this conference, students of the world over will lay by the basis for a permanent world federation. The federation will devote itself to the keeping of peace, security and the advancement of all students: politically, economically, and academically. The Arrangements Committee would welcome an expression from the colleges on how they feel that American student organization representatives should be chosen.)

DOCTOR VAUGHAN-BAXES—Faculty
Yes. Probably selection should be made from a list of candi dates presented for vote by both faculty and student body, and faculty participation should be included.

DOUGLAS BROWN—Sophomore
Yes, a delegate to represent the teachers colleges throughout the country should be included since one of the problems to be worked upon is the advancement of all students.

JANE LEWIS—Junior
Most members of the teachers colleges should have a repre dentative at the World Student Conference. The business of edu cation, which is one of the most vital means of achieving a world peace, should be represented.

The teachers colleges should never have been subordinated by the national government, or to any group of delegates, from the United States is an absolute necessity. After coming far in our physical efforts to main tain world stabilization, we are cer tainly worthy of representation in our work toward better international world order.

MISS BARBER—Faculty
There are numerous classifications of teachers colleges which might be placed for the purpose of choosing delegates. Surely one such group might place teachers colleges in a group. Whether that would be the place of student of the United States is an absol tute necessity. After coming far in our physical efforts to main tain world stabilization, we are cer tainly worthy of representation in our work toward better international world order.

College Ties St. Michael's In Close Basketball Contest

The College’s quintet met St. Michael’s on Thursday, March 14, in a breath-taking nip-and-tuck game that finished in a 13-13 tie.

The Rockies were helpless, while her opponents scored two baskets. Ruth Murphy did some beautiful interpecking, and seemed to pull the game from out of nowhere.

Jean Dailey, in the second quarter, was credited with the first basket for the College. Barbara Hock tossed a nice ball that skimmed the ring of the basket and ‘midst o-o-h’s and a-ch’s went in to even up the score.

The nice playing on the part of both teams came past the half-way mark. The College’s guards were really tops. When Shirley Shrader got the ball she held on to it; tall Jane Harrington reached up above the heads of all to prevent many a shot; Jean Kline covered the floor admirably.

The last quarter found St. Michael’s team getting a bit careless in guarding. Newarke State was awarded seven free shots on foul plays and made five of them. Virginia Cox and Elizabeth Smith combined to make an unbeatable set. Virginia Cox made the tying basket on the last play of the game.

Rita Ryan won the basketball club’s set-shot tournament on Thursday, February 28. Shooting from six floor positions, she made thirteen out of a possible thirty shots. Elayne Stein finished second with eight baskets.

The women’s bowling tournament is over. The winners were determined from more than twenty participants. Alice Mazzucco took first place in the finals, which was in the form of a round-robin. Second place went to Sarah Stein, second place winner, by the score of 124-109, and defeated Edith Davidson, who captured third place, by a 140-120 victory.

Baseball has already assumed a prominent light in the women’s sports life of the College. The freshmen sections have been practicing in physical education class, and will begin their tournament on March 18. Freshman 4 will meet Freshman 2, and Freshman 3 and B will meet Freshman 1 in the preliminary round. The championship game between the sections will take place on April 25.

Sophomore sections will engage in an inter-section baseball tournament in April. During the latter part of the school year the winners of the sectional contests will compete in an inter-level tourney. Junior 2 and Senior 4 won their inter-section tournaments, and will be entered in the inter-level competition.

Mrs. Dean Cetrulo, who performed before a College assembly recently, represented the College’s women’s section in the speech contest held in the Marionette Guild’s assembly recently.

The Library Council will sponsor a tea on Monday, April 1, for those interested in joining the Council. To be eligible for membership, one must be recommended by at least two faculty members and must have received an invitation to the tea. The Council will be announced at the tea, and tentative plans for the coming year will be formulated.

Shirley Goldfarb is chairman of the affairs of the library, represented by Genevieve Nuñalista, Muriel Robin, and Dorothy Eisen.

Uses Color Dynamics

Color dynamics of modern industry is now being utilized in the College Industrial Arts work shops.

In addition to improving the appearance of the shops, a more cheerful working environment is created by the planned and skillful use of color, design, and decoration. Manipulation of color is used for factors of safety by painting the critical parts of machines in bright colors. It also obtains maximum light and has the practical values of securing and holding attention and interest in the classroom.

An effort is being made to paint machines so that there will be a favorable contrast with the materials handled. This would reduce tension and eye strain and produce clearer vision.

Mr. Richmond of the Industrial Arts Department believes that more and better work can be accomplished in a more pleasant atmosphere obtained through color. He has suggested that the same principles of color dynamics might be extended to the College laboratories.
