College Poll: Favors Ike

Nov. 2 - Pre-election balloting at Newark Teachers School pictured the Eisenhower band. There were two hundred twenty-eight votes over Dwight Eisenhower's two hundred fifty votes, seventeen per cent, undecided ten per cent.

Despite the G.O.P. popularity, there are almost as many Demo- crats as Republicans. Thirty-two per cent of those polled claim to be Republican, thirty per cent, Democrat, and thirty per cent, independent. Only on some of the southern campuses does Stevenson have a majority. In Texas, though, students call themselves Eisenhower fifty-seven per cent, Stevenson thirty-three per cent, undecided ten per cent.

Students, Faculty Hear Adele Hoes Lee

Adele Hoes Lee is one of the best known lecturers in the field of drama. Her experience covers many years in the theater and radio world. After graduation from College Junior College in New Jersey, she studied play reading and drama literature at Leland Powers School of the Theater in Boston, supplementing this study with special work in English and drama at Columbia University.

She later became a teacher of platform work and the development of drama at her alma mater. She organized an open soldier actors show which was organized in Europe, she was sent to France in the capacity of director, and supervised the shows that traveled the A.E.F. circuit. This proves to be a happy adventure, for during this activity she met and married Mr. Lee, a member of a Reserve banking organization. He encouraged her to continue her career in the teaching and lecturing field. Early in the 1930's, the Bishop of New York incorporated in Boston, and at the same time the Lee family farm in the Berkshires was converted into one of the first successful summer theaters, known as the Neil Gwynn Theater.

Adele Lee was vice-president of the board of directors of Volunteers for the entertainment department of the First Service Command and the First Naval District. Under Mrs. Lee's direction, over five thousand shows were sent to servicemen in camps, hospitals, and aboard ships.

Her lectures on current theater are unique presentations. She reviews successes of each Broadway season and portrays their climactic scenes. Mrs. Lee brings a program of rare pleasure to any Bohemian reading.

Other college students have been expressing their choice of the candidates for student council president. There are almost as many Democrats as Republicans. Thirty-two per cent of those polled claim to be Republican, thirty per cent, Democrat, and thirty per cent, independent. Only on some of the southern campuses does Stevenson have a majority. In Texas, though, students call themselves Eisenhower fifty-seven per cent, Stevenson thirty-three per cent, undecided ten per cent.

Halloween Hangover

Hello, friend. You may now come out from under the table. The calendar on that desk is proof that Hallowe'en has passed, and 364 days of ignorant bliss shall be yours before that day descends upon you again.

You can smile again, and it won't be long before that nervous twitch disappears. Hospitalization shouldn't even be necessary, I'd recommend. If I were a movie director, I'd make a movie about movies, no smoking and no horror magazines. Why, within a month, you should be as good as new.

While you rest there with that ice bag on your head, I think I'll give you some advice on facing next year's phenomenon with more courage and calm.

You know, of course, that you're much too sensitive. You actually believe that heathen's spirit is actually getting the better of you, and darling is threatening to disintegrate you with his atomic ray gun if you didn't give him a dollar. You know there's no such thing as an atomic ray gun.

When the firemen hose down the bushes everytime you stepped out of the house. The bats loose in your living room? That was just a simple joke.

You can't know there's no such thing as an atomic ray gun. It's not like the teachers of the future. What happens to these children in school is of the utmost importance.

Before you started to shake, wasn't it? Okay -- so it wasn't accurate!

Well, I really must go. I've already spent too much time here, but I'll be back next year to see how you've made out. Do you think they'll let you out by then?

Sophs Hear
Stimulating Programs

Sophomores in the Education 215 course talked about the value of rehabilitation for the physically handicapped at Keisler Hall.

Sixty-six of the 85 Keiser Hall sophomores attended the meeting and were introduced to the work of the College's Committee on Rehabilitation.

Dr. Henry Wilcox, director of the college's Committee on Rehabilitation, said that the physically handicapped contribute twenty-five per cent of the nation's labor force.

The three points which Dr. Wilcox wanted the students to keep in mind were the necessity of personal independence, financial independence, and providing the necessary cooperation, which can be accomplished by education and training.

The students were also introduced to the Physical Therapy area of the Rehabilitation program. They were told that a number of Keiser Hall sophomores were taking this course.

The meetings are open to any interested student and are sponsored by the Social Science Department.

In Italy Loisi visited the Roman ruins and the Vatican, where she had a short audition with the Pope. She was very simple. Rationing is still a problem. She visited Venice and was surprised to learn that even gondoliers must join a union; some may sing and some may not, according to the union to which they belong. As an aside, Loisi likes the American way of life.

Of all the countries she visited, Loisi liked England best. While there she auditioned again for the Royal Festival and was able to see the Royal Festival along with the other sights. The people of England dress simply and are almost drab. Their food is also very simple consisting of fish and vegetables which is still England's big problem.

Though she was glad to get back to her family, Loisi was sorry to see her vacation end. She is planning to return before the next school year begins.

Newark State sends two co-ed teams to Paterson State. The November 21, Jean Oakes and Eleanor L. Jacobson, were there to greet both old and new members in the fundamentals of marksmanship, a non-nuclear procedure for handling of firearms, as well as enjoyment of the sport.

Newark State sent its two co-ed teams to the State college and the National Rifle Association. The Friday the girls did a series of drives. As soon as students are notified that they have a 15-minute notice, they are given on the stage.

Have you seen the seniors clustering around the student placement bulletin board lately? The Newark girls have utilized some winning faces because the places for student teaching have been post- terial in room three while the cast was assembled.

A detailed guidebook is given to each class was divided into committees, which chose a play. cut it to fifty minutes, and organize it into a regular Broadway show. They assigned reading parts, designed sets and costumes, and organized a set wherever they could find an available hour.
