Senior Awards
Graduate Grants
Henrietta Blatt and John P. Masterson, seniors at Newark State College, have been awarded graduate studies for the Master's degree. Miss Blatt will attend the University of Wisconsin at Madison. Her fellowship covers one academic year and a summer, and includes an optional three hours weekly of teaching. With the teaching assignment, the stipend for the full year is $4,155. Tuition fees are remitted. She intends to pursue her Master's work in sociology.

A history major, Miss Blatt is president of the campus chapter of Kappa Delta Pi, national education fraternity. She is also a member of Collegiate Council for the United Nations (CCUN). The Historical Society, and the orchestra. Miss Blatt is a Dean's List student.

Mr. Masterson has been awarded a postgraduate assistantship in the department of English Language and Literature at the University of Maryland, College Park. The assistantship provides a salary and remission of tuition fees. He will work in the department at the University. Mr. Masterson plans to take his degree in American Literature. An English major at Newark State, Mr. Masterson is president of the Inter-Fraternity Sorority Council (IFSC), and a member of Kappa Delta Pi and Nu Sigma Phi Fraternity.

Anthony Martino, Junior Class President and Dusty Brookes, noted TV personalities, will be the entertainment for the Junior Prom.

McWilliams Final Townsend Speaker

The distinguished editor of America's oldest journal of political comment comes to Newark State on Wednesday, May 6, when Carey McWilliams, editor of The Nation, appears here under the auspices of the Townsend Lecture Series.

Mr. McWilliams has devoted many years of study to problems of labor, agriculture and minority groups - problems upon which the spotlight of current thought has become increasingly focused. He has authored a dozen books, half of them on various phases of minority problems. His "A Mask for Privilege" transcended minority-majority problems and was an analysis of anti-democratic practices which affect the whole fabric of American life. More recently, he wrote "Witchhunt: The Revival of Heresy," When his book, "Prejudice," was published in 1944, Bernard De Voto called it a "public service of unquestionable value." "Brothers Under the Star" was translated into 17 languages and has been credited with having a marked effect on the development of local, state and federal policy toward minority groups.

Mr. McWilliams has also written a biography of Ambrose Bierce as well as several books on land and agriculture, notably "Fallout Shelters, Fare the Land," "Southern California: The Great Exception." He is also the author of "What's in a Name?" which has contributed to the Dictionary of American Biography as well as articles to such magazines as The Nation, The New Republic and the New York Times.

As the Atlantic, Harper's, Saturday Review and New Republic. Carey McWilliams was born in town Colorado with the colorful name of Steamboat Springs. He received a B.A. degree from the University of Southern California has the same year. He practiced law in Los Angeles until 1938 at which time he became associated editor in 1951, editorial director the following year, and assumed his present post of editor in 1952.

Highly popular as a speaker, Mr. McWilliams has lectured extensively at colleges and universities and at many forums around the country.

State College Change Proposed
The six State colleges and the State Department of Education are brace for a reform which may begin immediately after the Governor's Committee on New Jersey Higher Education report later this spring. The Controversy primarily concerns two recommendations being considered by the Committee.

1. That the State colleges be transformed from single-purpose, teaching institutions into multi-purpose colleges.

2. That control of higher education in New Jersey be switched from the control of the State Board of Education to the State Department of Education to the faculties of the State colleges.

There has been much argument over the proposal to make the six State colleges multi-purpose institutions. The main issues seem to be what is meant by multi-purpose: how soon the colleges can deviate from their single purpose and to what extent they may deviate.

Officials of the American Association of University professors question why the State Board of Education, while agreeing that the State colleges should be multi-purpose institutions, has not made any specific statement regarding the changeover in its expansion plans for the next five years.

The State officials are Dr. John J. Bicknell, professor of English at Drew University and president of the University of New Jersey; and Dr. William W. Holland, president of the State University of New York at Stony Brook.

In an election held on Monday, April 27, Joseph Hovance was elected president of the Inter - Fraternity - Sorority Council for 1964-65. Also elected were Jeana Mogor, vice-president, Albert Record, recording secretary, Phyllis Sigroi, and treasurer, Arlene Peater.

BACCALAUREATE-REQUIRED?

Baccalaureate, the service which all seniors are required to attend, is inspirational in nature. The program is presided over by representatives of three faiths: Protestant, Jewish and Catholic. Scheduled for a Sunday afternoon, the service has become a tradition at college.

The primary purpose of Baccalaureate is, hopefully, to instill in the individuals in attendance self-confidence upon entering a new and rather stressful period of life.

Some may be affiliated with any one of the three religious groups represented, or one could be agnostic in his beliefs, atheistic, or simply not care to hear what the clergymen have to say.

Another point must be raised. Can the administration of a state operated school require attendance at a program of religious nature? In the light of the present Supreme Court ruling prohibiting prayer in the public schools, we dare say not.

The Baccalaureate itself is a fine commendable tradition, but regarding the compulsory attendance, there should be serious reconsideration and evaluation.

CARNIVAL

Carnival at Newark State this year has been an unqualified success. We can help not only that the success is obvious due to the tremendous spirit of cooperation evidenced by all involved.

The chairman of the various committees are to be congratulated not only for the volume of work they accomplished but also for the way in which they worked with another for the over-all good of the entire project. We also feel it most important to note the magnificent job done by Miss Sandra Orletsky. Although this is her first year at Newark State, Miss Orletsky entered wholeheartedly into the spirit of the Carnival.

One other aspect which really must be mentioned in the fine attitude of the Faculty and Administration particularly with regard to their cooperation with the girls at the Whiteman Hall booth. It takes rather a lot of courage and a good sportsmanship to give low students the opportunity to throw water by the buckets at you. Dr. Smenfeld's appearance at this booth helped to get things off to a good start and it is a tribute to him, that though the situation was, to say the least, somewhat unsual, his dignity was maintained intact throughout.

In so again, our heartfelt congratulations to all involved. We hope that this tradition will continue to grow in the spirit of the 1964 Carnival.

There are certain exceptions. Perhaps one is not affil­ inated with any of the three religious groups repre­

ented, and feels that the views presented will be biased.

tions to the right, to the Deep South, particularly to the sovereign states of Southern and some Northern states, that are controlled by the House of Representatives, and particularly in Mississippi, many Federal EEOC judges have a long record of resistance to the legislative requirements of racial equality and the 1957 and 1960 Civil Rights Acts.

4. Dirksen submits that the new enforcement approach will be consistent with the idea that good-faith attempts to discriminate is "willful." This approach is illogical, unworkable, in statutes with civil remedies. The use of "willful" is normally reserved for criminal statutes.

Moreover, the Justice Department has been cautioned not to use excessive enforcement powers in enforcing civil rights laws.

Miss Gloria Houston was the first home economist to go overseas with the Peace Corps, and only recently returned from two years in the West Indies. She was assigned to the tiny island of St. Lucia, where she gave a taste of timeslessness.

"It was so relaxed," she said. "And the things you read about just aren't true. Everybody knows everybody else and all their business.

Gloria's job took her to every corner of the island (46 miles at its greatest length), where she visited schools and helped set up home economics courses in the local schools. She also worked on a three year series of lessons, developed home economics classes, and advised new instructors on teaching techniques.

Driving from village to town in a Landrover jeep, Gloria was hailed by friends along the mountain roads, always ready for a chat, from "Hey Dolly," to "Hi Peace Corps." Of course, folks asked her if she was the local French painter, who was called "Lepeu de Jep." Her home was an old fort at the top of a hill overlooking Castries Harbour.

"Monstrous!" she said. "Much too big for six girls. But it had the best view on the whole island."

When we went to bat, rats and raccoons, we really enjoyed it.

Gloria speaks of St. Lucia with a distant voice, remembering steel bands and calypso, cricket games and daily raim, 30 degree heat and holidays.

"Especially Carnival," she said. "It lasts for three days, beginning at dawn on the Sunday before Lent. There's a calypso dancing in the streets, hundreds of people in each band, and every one's in costume. Rich and poor are equal.

Her fondest memory is of Carnival. A group of 60 children in one of the poorer sugar cane villages asked her to help them form a band, since their parents could not afford to get costumes and instruments. She did, and they won prizes.

Gloria was fascinated with St. Lucian government. "It's small enough so that you can see the whole picture and really understand how it works."

Anxious to pursue a career in international relations, Gloria plans to go back to school before making her next overseas departure.

Of her Peace Corps experience she says, "I particularly liked my job. There was so much variety. It was a lovely island, so mountainous and green. And the people... I'll miss them."

LENSON STILL ON EXHIBIT

Students and Faculty who have not had an opportunity to view Michael Lenson's painting exhibition in the gallery of the Arts Building will have until May first to do so. The paintings are oil and the rest are acrylic. The human anatomy is depicted in an abstract manner in all the works. Mr. Lenson has been described as a 'magical realist' in that his paintings are a marriage of realism and fantasy. He also has been referred to as a 'social' painter. Another interesting aspect of his work is his intriguing effect with surface textures.
Cunningham Lesson Highlights Symposium

The D'Angola Gym was the setting for the Annual New Jersey Level Modern Dance Symposium on Saturday, April 18. Colleges in attendance included Newark State, Fairleigh Dickinson from Madison and Teaneck, Jersey City State, St. Elizabeth College, Upsala, Georgian Court, Centenary, Trenton State, and the Newark YWCA. With approximately one-hundred dancers in the symposium, the program varied from techniques to polished costumed dances.

Among the highlights of the symposium was a warm-up in the morning by Charlene Tavner who teaches dance at the YWCA. One could only marvel at the remarkable male talent also displayed. All were impressed with their masculinity and athletic style. A master lesson was given in the afternoon by the exciting Merce Cunningham. He shared his thorough knowledge of dance with his enthusiastic class.

The culminating event of the afternoon was swimming in the college pool.

WRA News

The first archery instructor's workshop to be held in New Jersey took place April 17th to 18th at the school of conservation, Stokes State Forest. Representing the WRA from Newark State College were Miss Staples Persinger, archery advisor, and students Carol Heerwagen, Frances Fraswijk, Theresa Urban and Carol Kaiser.

The program was under the direction of Dr. John Kirk and Mr. J. Wilson. Outfitted with a set of new equipment, each of the fifty teachers and students attending the workshop were given personal instructions in shooting techniques and methods of aiming.

The week-end was highlighted by bow fishing, field archery, archery games and a personal appearance by the famous Myrtle Miller. There were also discussion sessions on safety, care of equipment and archery crafts.

Squires Lose

Two More

Newark State lost two more games last week, one to Monmouth and one to Newark College of Engineering. The Squires were whitewashed for the second time on their schedule. They were beaten 9-0 by a strong Monmouth nine. The Squires collected only four hits, one each by Vin Merlin, John Gluck, Les Ragnesee, and Steve Friedeman. Gerry Stiles again was the losing pitcher.

The Squires managed only two hits but scored two runs in their 8-2 loss to Newark College of Engineering.

Viewpoint on Sports

by Arnold Silverman

The end of the year is fast approaching and with it the cessation of newspaper activities until next September. The sports section of the Independent this year has functioned, whether adequately or inadequately, with basically one person at its helm. It seems inconceivable that this should happen when a college can boast of having a population of approximately 2000 students.

There is no complaint or bitterness on the part of this writer. It was enjoyable work and an effort well worth the time. But this doesn't say too much for the rest of the student population. In most colleges throughout the country the newspaper is one of the most popular of campus activities. In recent editions of the Glassboro, Paterson State, and Seton Hall newspapers, there were no less than three bylines on the sports' page which meant that three people had contributed articles.

This year is over and we have no more time to look forward to. But is there anything to look forward to in the way of a sports' page with new ideas and new talent or will one person again do all the writing, all the editing, all the picture taking, and finally the layout of the entire page? We do need people to work on the sports' page. This year is too late, but next year isn't.
