We, the Enemy

(Colleges and universities throughout the country are celebrating academic freedom this week. This editorial is a reprint from the National Student News.)

WE ARE THE ENEMIES of academic freedom. We the American students, are destroying one of the most necessary of all liberties. We cast the free exercise of the most vital freedom.

We do not lose our freedom by failing to defend it; nor do we lose it by fighting it. Freedom of speech is meaningless in the uncritical acceptance of texts; the right to examine all points of view turns into an empty phrase in the face of answers parroted from lecture notes.

"WHATEVER IS, IS RIGHT" is applied regularly to the contents of college textbooks. We forget all too easily that "fact" is not in terms of fact and informed to study, to consider, to criticize, must be prepared to defend it view which will "please" the instructor. We

The State Board of Education at its meeting held on March 5, 1958, adopted a resolution officially changing the names of all the State Teachers Colleges (hence the campus at Union effective July 1, 1958 will be known as Newark State College.) Reasons for this same change were enumerated in the resolution as follows: The renaming of State Teachers Colleges has already taken place in twenty different states, the renaming of the New Jersey State Teachers Colleges would be uniform in designation to support the idea of a system of public higher education, the new designation should be easily and quickly recognized as a public institution, the renaming of the New Jersey State Teachers Colleges ought to modify as little as possible the current designation to support the idea of a system of public higher education.

U.N. Fair In Jersey City

Letters to the Editor

Dear Editor:

In reply to your editorial, "Is it Worth It?", we say, "Yes!" Most extra-curricular activities in this college are formal affairs. Many of us are working and find it impossible to stay for meetings and attend conferences. We feel that our College stays and feel that we have the right to spend our free time as we desire.

Bridge is really a fascinating game, why don’t you try it some time? Linda Halperin

Dear Editor:

In a recent editorial you condemned the "ha-jor-naire" for his informal appearance for playing bridge during their leisure time. It may interest you to know that the "ha-jor-naire" has on one of the most popular activities at colleges throughout the country and the world for over forty years. The game of bridge has been so popular at colleges that it is common for students to wear Bermudas to class on Sunday afternoons, and to attend bridge games on campus. In other words, they accepted him for what he was, not what he looked like. It is true that "we are concerned with what the people think of us", but I believe that a more important virtue is self-respect. We come to college to learn--to get impressions, not only to gain them. We must delve into unexplored knowledge with sincerity and gather valuable information. I do not believe one’s dress is an expression of what type of teacher he will be, but instead his performance is important. It is really necessary for a girl to wear a skirt or follow to wear slacks, raids, or Bermudas during regular school hours? Or is it more important during exams or at any other time to excel in improvement and concentrate on the development of the mind? Perhaps, for graduation ceremonies, but why then, must people "play the part" now? We have learned through experience not to judge a book by its cover. We have also learned that everyone is an individual with certain characteristics, and we should respect and admire his uniqueness. We fail to realize this when we condemn others by comparing their likes, dislikes, etc., to our own. We classify people as "unusual, odd, and queer" if they exhibit their individuality. One must not divert from the norm if he wants to be accepted in our society.

Not many years ago women were thought bold to show their ankles. Today it is not uncommon to see a woman display her knees. Many people don’t even take a second look when a girl or a woman wears Bermudas to class. They are accepted almost everywhere, including colleges and universities. We are no longer living in the "dark age."

If such prominent and professional schools as Harvard, Yale, Columbia, and Smith allow the students to attire themselves informally, in what unique category is Newark State classified, where the majority of the student population plays bridge for over forty years. The game of bridge is played by students throughout the country and is considered as "the right way". One would not dream in this country to attempt to tell others what flavor of ice cream to choose, or the type of car to buy. He might suggest or stress an opinion, but who is to judge the validity of his standards?

If such prominent and professional schools as Harvard, Yale, Columbia, and Smith permit students to wear Bermudas to class on Sunday afternoons, and yet Virginia State University is preparing for a weekend celebration, there can be no debate over whether Bermudas should or should not be worn.

Letters to the Editor

Dear Editor:

I was delighted to find Newark State so different from high school, where we were required to wear uniforms and slacks. At college, I have seen students wearing Bermudas and slacks. The majority of the student population for playing bridge has "the majority" of students accepting and respecting the player, the teacher, not the appearance.

If such prominent and professional schools as Harvard, Yale, Columbia, and Smith permit students to wear Bermudas to class on Sunday afternoons, and yet Virginia State University is preparing for a week-end celebration, there can be no debate over whether Bermudas should or should not be worn.

CCUN Plays Role of Syria
A nine member delegation from the CCUN Club of the Mid-Atlantic Model General Assembly at Wilkes College, Wilkes-Barre, Pennsylvania, represented their club.

The delegation, which was advised by Dr. Donald R. Raichle, President of Wilkes College, and Dr. Arthur Holder, Jacqueline Kim berg, Michelle Lasseux, Gail Mag gin, Harriet Mann, Shirley Miller, Katrina Pilavakis, Mu rad, and Barbara Anderson, the group participated in the Model General Assembly in the role of Congressmen in order to acquaint the participants with the complexity of world problems.

Upon their return, the students gave an account of the de legation at a plenary session held on the first day of the three day schedule of activities. Also welcoming the participants were the three voting delegates and the presiding officers of the Assembly. Following the first presentation of this delegation, the Assembly passed a series of resolutions. The work kshop of the Model General Assembly was very similar to that of the actual United Nations.

The delegation was headed by Katrina Pilavakis, who was President, and members of CCUN, acted in the position of rapporteur.

Squad Rescues "Ladies in Distress"
A group of students from Newark State who were attending the April 22, 1958 ACE Conference in Atlantic City were stranded near Point Pleasant for two hours. The station wagon in which they were traveling mysteriously ran out of gas. The women, who were traveling with a selling salesman, Mr. Edna Salt, and a state safety inspector, Mrs. Edna Salt, were rescued by a traveling salesman, Mrs. Edna Salt, and a state safety inspector, Mrs. Edna Salt, and a state safety inspector.

Mr. Edna Salt, who was driving the group, was able to stop the car and start the engine. The women were then able to continue their journey.

Student Questions Critics Of Progressive Education
by Art Holder

(Observer's Note: It is most probable that students in a teachers college have opinions and ideas about recent educational issues. This article is an example of the students of this college expressing their views through the RELECTOR.)

Progressive education and all it stands for is under attack by many. One of the many who are attacking these critics are just as much wind. I do not believe that they have correctly evaluated the educational situation.

One of the myths that the critics of education emphasize is the idea that progressive education is an attempt to do away with the existing educational system. This is not true. Progressive education is an attempt to improve upon the existing system. The critics are trying to make people believe that progressive education is a threat to the existing system.

Senior Speech Majors Conduct Several Surveys
Sixteen senior class members of the Speech Handicapped Cur riculum have recently participated in several surveys involving over one thousand children.

The first of these surveys was held in Burlington City, New Jersey, and involved the collection of data on the educational program. The second survey was conducted in New York City, and involved the collection of data on the educational program. The third survey was conducted in Chicago, and involved the collection of data on the educational program. The fourth survey was conducted in Washington, D.C., and involved the collection of data on the educational program.

Congressmen Recognize Federal Aid Support
Letters which expressed Newark State's support of the Federal Aid to Education Program recommended by President Eisenhower and Secretary of Commerce Director of Commerce were sent to a number of United States Congressmen from New Jersey.

At a recent meeting of the Student Council, the representatives of the Student Organization discussed various issues. They spoke of their awareness of the emphasis on education throughout the country and the raising of enrollment and increased educational standards in all colleges and universities. They felt it was the responsibility of the Student Organization of Newark State to take part in and to support the programs that will benefit the youth in education in the future.

As a result of the discussion on current education news, they approved the Federal Aid to Education Program and supported the resolutions dealing with federal scholarships and aid programs for students passed by the 10th National Student Congress (NSA) past summer at the University of Michigan. Congressmen from New Jersey were informed of the Student Organization's actions in letters written by the Student Organization's President, Maxine Feinberg, on behalf of the Student Organization.

The letters were received by the Congressmen and Senator Clifford Case. He recommends that the bill be voted on by the Senate. In all the letters the Student Organization was thanked for its interest in education and education issues. Following are parts from a few of the letters.

From Senator Case: "I appreciate your interest in the Federal Aid to Education Program. Please rest assured I shall keep your comments in mind in the future. The schedule is House consideration.

From Representative Ives: "Thank you for your letter. I assure you that the Federal Aid to Education Program will be brought to the attention of the State Teachers College at Union. I appreciate your support for the Administration's education bill, which I have joined in supporting.

From Congresswoman Florence Dwyer: "With great pleasure, I have had the opportunity to introduce the Federal Aid to Education Program at a recent letter concerning Federal aid to education. I am happy to let you know that the Federal Aid to Education Program will be brought to the attention of the National Student Congress (NSA). I will support the Federal Aid to Education Program and the National Student Congress (NSA). I will support the Federal Aid to Education Program and will encourage students to take an active interest in the educational problems facing our country today."

Sports Writer Views College Gym

I left the offices of Sports Illustrated and felt happy over my return to a world of college football, an issue of my writing, the sweat of those industry, my college career, where there is no one to get in your hair, no one to say anything to you, no one to knock you down. I love that feeling of being able to do my own thing. I love that feeling of being able to make my own decisions. I love that feeling of being able to be myself. I love that feeling of being able to be the best. I love that feeling of being able to be the best. I love that feeling of being able to be the best.

DIAMOND DUST
by Phil Dever

With the opening games of the season having been cancelled due to field conditions, the Newark College baseball team has played as this paper goes to press. The two cancelled games with Newark Rutgers and Montclair will be played at a later date.

Umbrellas were kept handy under their belts, and has shown promise in both tilts. The pitching staff seems exceptionally strong, with a strong right and left arm on the part of Maney (Gordilla) Alvarado and John Healey, respectively. More help, if needed, may be derived from Owen Nute and Joe Kaufman. For base hits, Coach Ering- ton will look to the big bats of outfielders Don Ceres, Jack Gutjahr, Art Aussomano and George Hudak along with outfielders Don Ceres and Jack Gutjahr. And has been the nucleus of the teams production.

Below is printed the schedule for this season, and it is the hope of the entire team that each game will be played, and that the season will be competitive. It is the hope of the entire team that each game will be played, and that the season will be competitive.

The Fair Sex Invades Sports

The women's softball season has gotten off to an excellent start. In the club, there are two types of softball players: There are those who take the game seriously, those who take the game seriously, those who take the game seriously, and those who take the game seriously, and those who take the game seriously, and those who take the game seriously, and those who take the game seriously, and those who take the game seriously. But for this article, we would like to stress the entertainment aspect of the "trying" players. During one meeting, a lighted Junior was completely baffled and stunned when she was told to play in the position of shortstop. The poor soul was unaware of such a creative development, and there was another bewildered player who got her finger caught in the waffle iron.

One of the biggest projects of the season occurred last week when the freshman baseball team played its first varsity game this season. This event was regarded by many famous sports writers as the most outstanding surprise of the ST-86 season.

A practice game between the same two teams had been held a week prior to their probability appearance in the fall season. At this point, most of the fans had had their fill and began filing out. "Vigorous" Vinicio Guarino started the first-year men on their way to the championship game by the unbelievable score of 4-2. Guzzo Campbell and Joe Novack,化妆 Spank, handed in their resignations immediately following the contest.
