LATINA AND THE INTERSECTIONALITY OF OUR VARIOUS IDENTITIES

7 pm, NSC 224

Identity, the way we see ourselves concerning those around us, comprises many traits and social roles, chosen and unchosen, visible, and invisible. Identity can be the source of our most exceptional pride and the site of our greatest vulnerability. The most painful emotional attacks are the ones that are aimed at who we are.

JYOTI GUPTA COLORISM CONVERSATIONS

9:30 pm, Wilson Student Center (NSC) 224

Organizations today are challenging and changing systems that value people based on their race and skin color. What do we know about, and how can we dismantle historically-practiced, everyday biases rooted in skin color that have a tremendous bearing on our social relations? In this workshop led by media and racial literacy educator Jyoti Gupta, we will examine our identities and social roles as both individuals and parts of a larger community. While watching entertaining media clips and indulging in a creative project, we will find pathways to the much-needed inner work. Together, we will locate and resolve some of the conflicts we encounter in everyday scenarios and bring home the message of diversity, equity, and inclusion.
